

NATIONALS' LINE-UP FOR DETROIT GAMES

Schaefer Will Not Play. Slattery May Be at First.

WALKER TO WORK AGAINST TIGERS

Kusel Is Well Panned in Third Game With St. Louis Browns.

By THOMAS S. RICE.
Let us now consider that big series which begins here, next Tuesday between Washington and Detroit. It is not necessary to consider at any great length that walloping Washington gave a fledgling named Kusel yesterday, when it made nineteen hits and beat St. Louis 15 to 7. That was more or less a comedy. But, about the aforementioned big series—Cantillon will not use Germany Schaefer. This is to avoid all possible charges, hints or insinuations that Schaefer's human element and a regard for his share of the world's series "colts" had overcome his sense of sportsmanship in professional baseball. This seems a wise provision for Schaefer's hands are not in good shape, anyhow.

Despite the grueling he was receiving, Kusel kept on trying. That's something.

Gray will pitch the opener with Detroit on Tuesday. If Jennings sends a southpaw to the slab, Conroy will play third, Unglaub second, and Slattery first. If it is a right hander, then Conroy will play second, Yohe third, and Unglaub first. Slattery will do the catching. This is about the strongest alignment Washington can present, and it was by thus putting his best talent in the field against the Tigers that Washington has taken five games, while Detroit has won only one. Similar tactics will be employed against the Athletics, and there will be no occasion to complain that the team was juggled to give Detroit an advantage. If that cry should be raised, and it very probably will, by a certain class of chronic kickers, unless Washington wins all five games, bear in mind that Detroit took the entire series from the Athletics in Detroit on the last Western trip.

Don't blame Kusel so much for the farce. His support was as bad as he was.

Groom, Johnson, and Walker will be the other pitchers who will work against Detroit. If Johnson is able to take his turn, and the manager thinks he will be, the point to this pitching line is that Cantillon has taken a fancy to the work of Walker, and thinks the younger has a chance to hold his own against present indications. Also Cantillon does not believe there is much danger of Walker throwing his arm away by the peculiar violence with which he shoots the ball up to the plate. He cited Addie Joss as an example of a pitcher who lets go with all his might, and he throws, and said Walker had somewhat the same style. Let us trust that the manager man is right.

Strangely enough, although nineteen hits were made off Kusel, the cracks never went around more than once. In the first and third innings just nine men faced him, and the next largest number was eight.

You have perhaps noticed that Slattery is being injected into the game at first base when the opportunity offers. The reason for this is that Slattery has played first for other teams, and Cantillon is preparing him to fill that position in case of an emergency. Slattery has been shifted elsewhere. Unglaub is the handiest individual in the squad. He has given a perfect imitation of playing well at second, short and third, and in the outfield, and is a first sacker of renown. When one of the brethren is smitten beneath the chin, Slattery is spiked in the toe, Unglaub is rushed to the vacancy, which is all right in its way, but there is no one to fill the gap at first while Donohue is lame, hence the coming of Slattery into prominence and the score sheets. And besides, the idea of having a 250 batter who knows baseball sitting around on the bench is repugnant to the manager. He said this morning it made him weep to have all that potential slugging resting in the shade, when men glad to bat 250 were hustling in the sun. It offended his sense of the fitness of things, and quite properly so.

Just a moment, please. Here's a football news item published in a Philadelphia paper this morning:
"The Cardinals Indian team has lost two of its best players. Hip-the-old-Man has become so aged that he has quit college, and the other, who is a trained leg and will be seen no more in the line-up."

If Doc Redding is going to do the Tom Hughes or Jesse Tannehill act on us next season in the matter of falling by the wayside from advancing years he gave no indication of it yesterday. That venerable individual pitched as good ball as could be asked. There was no use in him hurrying his arm off, and just possibly he let some of the old-timers in the St. Louis line-up make a hit or two to sweeten the averages. If so, it did Doc no harm and helped the other fellows. We expect to see Doc among those present when one of the Commissioners throws out the first ball next April.

Here is the substance of the panning of Kusel:

GOOD GRID SEASON ASSURED WASHINGTON

Managers of College and High School Elevens Are Expecting Great Things—Independents Will Be Prominent.

The pickin boys are with us again. During the past week many of the leading universities, colleges and high schools began football practice, and those that did not will start this week. Washington is a lover of football and watches the trend of the collegiate game about as closely as any other city in the country, but the real interest here centers in the two local universities and the five high school elevens. As usual, the optimistic "best squad produced in years" has emanated from the camps of the various teams which have already gotten down to work, but, at that, there can be little doubt that the present season will at least come up to the high standard set by the scholastic and university aggregations here last fall.

Three Are Out.
George Washington developed one of the fastest elevens in the South last year. Georgetown did not come up to its previous high standard, but was a respected member of the Southern collegiate ring, and within the five preceding seasons there cannot be found a high school campaign that was followed with the interest shown last year. Present indications point to as promising a season this fall.

George Washington University and Central and Tech High Schools are already beyond the panning and passing period and will start this week on a good, rough program. A majority of the Hatcherite squad are now in shape for strenuous times. It has been nearly two weeks since the first call for candidates was issued at that school and the men now plainly show the advantage derived from an early start. Tech and Central took the initial limbering up last Monday, and after a week of this sort of thing are, according to their respective coaches, ready for some serious endeavor.

Georgetown Starts.
Georgetown swings open the football lockers tomorrow, and although studies do not begin until a week hence, it is expected that most of the football players will be on hand before that time. Eastern, Western, and Business High schools will likewise inaugurate their season tomorrow.

The relative merits of the various teams in the present time is problematical. None of the institutions now at work has yet corralled a full squad, and as those who begin tomorrow will not be out in full numbers for about ten days it will be impossible to get a definite line on Washington's collegiate and scholastic football material for the fortnight.

G. W. U. Is Stronger.
Manager Summers, of George Washington, says the 1932 team will surpass the record-breaker of 1931, which was picked by some of the most competent football judges of the South as the gridiron boss of that section. Only very few of the veterans are now mis-ing, and the influx of new material is more encouraging than ever before. Lost games by George Washington University last year were few and far between, and if this season's eleven can go over the route in an even more commendable style, then Washington will reach its high water mark in collegiate gridironing.

Georgetown looks promising. Until the men get into logs it will be hard to determine its true value, but those of the blue and gray players who have already returned speak in most glowing terms of this fall's prospects. It is not a matter of conjecture that Georgetown will have a good team. Only a scant number of the 1931 players will be present, and with the pick of last season's strong scrub it should not be difficult to develop an eleven capable of surpassing the last record made on the west end gridiron last year.

Technical Favorite.
In the high schools it looks to be a battle among the coaches. No football game was ever decided in practice, but it is generally admitted that this feature is oftentimes a material aid in winning. Such should be the case in the scholastic organization this fall, although at the present time Technical seems a little better armored in material than any of the other schools.

The Manual Trainers walked off with the 1931 high school championship and will appear with practically that same team when the coming campaign opens. Only three of the experienced men are missing. Coach Hecox has had his proteges out for a week, and after that survey of his working matter seems to enjoy the prospect of competing against the ablest body of coaches the high schools have ever obtained.

Central Busy.
Coach Kirby and Central are nearly synonymous. While the O street school has a goodly squad, it looks raw in spots, and it will take much polishing to put on the championship color. Not to be outdone by their natural rivals, since they are the two largest high schools in the city, Central not precisely the same outfit about town. In the excitement over the collegians and schoolboys there has been a shadowy background of the elevens. But they are at practice. Washington in the present time is problematical. None of the institutions now at work has yet corralled a full squad, and as those who begin tomorrow will not be out in full numbers for about ten days it will be impossible to get a definite line on Washington's collegiate and scholastic football material for the fortnight.

Field Games Popular.
Until last season there had been little or no interest among the independents. Enthusiasts over these games were likewise very few. But a new era seems assured. Before the close of the 1932 season immense crowds will be drawn by these contests, and the scholastic rivalry was nearly as pronounced as that between the various scholastic elevens. H.M.D.

HUSKY ATHLETES FOR HIBERNIANS

New York Weight Throwers May Break Records—Other Good Features.

Weight throwing records may be broken at the athletic meet of the Hibernians, which opens at Benning race track next Wednesday.

There has been a record in these games a squad of the most celebrated weight men, Martin J. Sheridan, John Flanagan, Matthew McGrath and Ben Sherman, all of New York, the latter a newcomer to Washington. Sheridan, as is characteristic of him, has signed up for practically everything on the program. He is said to be in championship form. The weight events will be held on Thursday, beginning at 5:15 o'clock.

The motor cycle races, which will precede the athletic events, are well filled.

Three relay races and the championship game of Gaelic football between Divisions No. 1 and 2, and the tug-of-war between the Germans and Irish will make up the remainder of the athletic program for the first day.

A tournament will be held the second day, with the best known knights of this section of the country in the saddle. Lawrence Schell is looking after this feature for the Hibernians.

The ten-mile run has created the greatest amount of interest. The teams of the Cross Country Club, of Baltimore, and the Washington Y. M. C. A. are the principal rivals.

IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN WORSE, BUT

Merciful Umpire and Shades of Evening Saved Baltimore News Nine.

WASHINGTON TEAM A CLASSY OUTFIT

That Is the Occasional Washington Times Baseball Team Is.

It might have been worse than Washington Times 17, Baltimore News 8, if darkness or the gentlemanly umpire, G. Bert Repasz, or the lack of more pitchers on the part of the ball tossers from the Monumental City had not stopped the game at the end of the fifth inning. Despite the score, it was a great contest, in which the mostly civilian volunteers of Baltimore's human pretzel, Vogler, were equaled by few and surpassed by none except perhaps by Left Fielder and Captain McIntyre, of the home team, whose glass arm whip was in excellent form and who delighted the spectators with "Pop" Flemming by his little ability.

The game began about 4 o'clock on the White House Ellipse and ended a little before 7. It was a real home run, error, Martini cocktails, and speeches. Whether the home runs or the Martini brought forth the more enthusiasm could hardly be told. To differentiate one must have possessed the calm, unflinching mental poise of the well-known F. Stringer, who as second base for Washington, accepted all chances and never a glimpse of pop.

Washington won through the superior twirling of Harry Dodd, the well-known bush leaver, who struck out five men. Dodd went into the box in the second inning, it looked as if Baltimore might make Paul Callahan look like a broken sorcerer in a rich wind. Baltimore could get but one run from Dodd, and if Mr. Stringer, the said second baseman, had not put in the fifth inning the score probably would have been 17 to 1 instead of 17 to 8.

Nobody was keeping score at Harvey's except possibly the head waiter or the white clothed gentlemen. There wasn't any use in keeping score, and besides, they were coming too fast, and besides one always loses count after the fourth, and besides what's the use. Here the way it all happened:

SWIMS THE HUDSON IN EXCELLENT TIME

Amateur Makes Two and Three-Quarter Miles in 30 Minutes, 5 Second.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—George Hyde, a well-known amateur swimmer, won the Young Men's Christian Association championship of Greater New York yesterday by swimming the Hudson river from the New Jersey side to 15th street in 30 minutes 5 seconds.

Hyde, 27, cut out diagonally across the river, was two and three-quarters miles, and Hyde's time, made with the help of a 200-pound man, to be the fastest crossing of the Hudson ever made at this point.

MINNEHAHA OWNER WANTS A MATCH

Posts $1,000 for Race With Ten-Mile Winner in Potomac Regatta.

T. H. Pickford, owner of the motor cruiser Minnehaha, has posted $1,000 with the sporting editor of The Times to bid a match with the winner in the ten-mile cruiser class in the big Potomac regatta held Saturday, the race to be run under the rules of the American Motor Boat Association, and to be raced ten to 200 hundred miles. Pickford is most anxious for the race. He had intended to enter the original race, but for some reason was not allowed to start in that class. As a guarantee of good faith he has already posted the money, and expects to hear from the winners of the winning boat within a few days. The challenge is open to acceptance for fifteen days.

TURNER RETURNS AND IS MATCHED

Joe Turner, the Washington middle-weight wrestler, returned today from a tour through the South, where he engaged in many matches. Among the men he threw were August Gust, of Allentown, Pa., and John Poll, the Greek.
